Marc's story

Marc spent his youth searching for enlightenment. Having made his “Outer Million” easily at an early age, Marc soon realized that he was missing its intangible counterpart, which he calls “The Inner Million”. He duly set off in search of it, initially by studying religions and spending time in an Indian monastery based on Kashmir Shaivism and Kaula Tantra.

Although greatly grown, he felt limited by the monastic system, and decided to step away from religions altogether and re-embarked on his quest. This second phase of Marc's self-realization journey led him through many countries and years of in-depth engagement with disciplines including psychotherapy, ontology, Zen meditation, method acting, fire walking as well as transformational coaching and training.

Having found what he was looking for, Marc returned to the mundane world in order to share his wisdom with others. He developed a body of work and methodology that he branded “Creative Consciousness[®]”, and since then has been a successful entrepreneur, thought leader, and philosophical teacher all over the world.
