The Big Market Problem

Financing is complicated and in most cases outside the control of the business.

Problem I: Rejection Rates

High Rejection Rates

21% of those seeking financing are rejected by traditional lenders, leading to frustration and lost opportunities.

Fear of Application

6% of potential applicants don't even initiate the process due to the fear of rejection, creating a barrier to access.

Problem 2: Fear of Financing

Impact on Margins

Businesses are frequently hesitant to offer financing solutions due to concerns about the potential negative impact on their profit margins, fearing that extended payment terms or additional fees might reduce overall profitability.

Manual and Tedious Process

Collecting money can be a manual and tedious process, draining valuable time and resources from businesses and leading to inefficiencies.

Lack of Knowledge

Many businesses also face a significant hurdle due to a lack of knowledge on how to effectively offer financing solutions to their clients, hindering their ability to grow.

84% of businesses surveyed expressed a fear of financing,

Problem 3: Lack of Control

Traditional financing processes are often convoluted and opaque, leaving businesses feeling powerless over their own transactions and client interactions.

Businesses often face rigid terms that don't align with their unique needs or client situations, limiting their ability to customize offerings and respond to market demands.

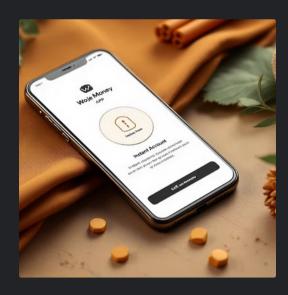

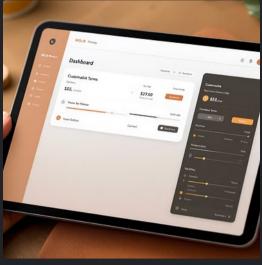

By outsourcing financing, businesses risk losing direct control over the client relationship, potentially leading to a disconnect between the service provider and the client's financial journey.
